Thus, the actual code inspection meeting of step 106 need only [[to]] focus on comments already provided as discussion points. This greatly reduces the actual meeting time for the inspection meeting because most of the reviewers have already reviewed the code and so, most of the code does not require additional consideration. After any outstanding issues are resolved, the author completes the inspection process by correcting the identified problems and the moderator verifies the corrections. Re-publishing the corrected code is optional and may be useful when the item is subject to corrections.
